Abstract

The State Program on the Development of Education of the Republic of Kazakhstan (RK) 2011-2020 tasked with improving management education.

Corporate governance has been developed in recent decades, despite the fact that corporate relations in developed economies exist for a long time. In Kazakhstan practice of corporate governance in higher education has found its development recently. This is due, on the one hand, the need for evidence-based approaches to the implementation of the development of the methodology and mechanisms for implementation of corporate governance principles in the universities of Kazakhstan in the modernization of higher education, and on the other - not enough practical application of these principles in the activities of universities of Kazakhstan. In addition, there is an objective need for managers who have specific knowledge of the educational activities at the university. Many universities of Kazakhstan today need specialists with management skills.

Implementation of the principles of corporate governance in the universities of Kazakhstan will facilitate the transition from state to state and public administration and transparency of universities.
